Invitation to learn why childhood diseases have risen dramatically and what you can do about it...

Research confirms that there is an alarming rise in a range of childhood disease including allergies, asthma, ADHD, autism, and learning delay. Cutting edge medical science indicates that these seemingly unrelated conditions are medically linked by underlying issues of nutritional deficiencies, toxicity and infections.

An Integrative approach that focuses on Metabolic, Immunologic, Neurologic and Digestive Disorders (MINDD) can address a range of issues including concentration, behaviour, fatigue and overall health. This in turn optimises a child's mental and physical health.

Most importantly an Integrative approach reduces the risk of long-term disease and often eliminates the need for treating symptoms with puffers, grommets, antibiotics, cortisone cream, antihistamines and surgery.
